

Possible Health Risks

Have you ever thought about the health risks of competing in a hot dog eating contest? Professional speed eaters eventually may develop morbid obesity, profound gastroparesis, intractable nausea, and vomiting. Even the need for a gastrectomy. These health risks are very dangerous and the head of these contest do not want innocent people getting seriously hurt.

Money Constraints

Although health risks are the number one reason for the cancelling of the contest, money is also a big issue. There are not many supporters and contributors to the contest so money is scarce. The producers of the contest do not have enough money to purchase all of the hot dogs for the contestants to eat. Because of these two factors, the local hot dog eating contest is cancelled.
